1.I have small number of files which are locked and when i tried to unlock them as per the direction i get this Rar engine V0.40rc1. Error - 1: Could not read header at 0x000007E8. Error - 2: File not found at offset 0x00000070 in the filename. In many files some of the files may contain info like in the following in the files delta, memo, mat, help,memo1,memo2,memo3, In my Media folder i have old size files and in the folder i have three parts of each file respectively : part1, part2, part3. I want to use the hashes of the files to unlock the contents of the other folder and the old files. I believe the process to be as per the below Unlock the contents of the folder 1) Unarchive one part 2) Extract contents 3) Lock part2 (Which is smaller of the parts1 and part2. But i get the below when i use the below Rar engine V0.40rc1. Error - 1: Could not read header at 0x000007E8. Error - 2: File not found at offset 0x00000070 in the filename. In many files some of the files may contain info like in the following in the files delta, memo, mat, help,memo1,memo2,memo3, In my Media folder i have old size files and in the folder i have three parts of each file respectively : part1, part2, part3. I want to use the hashes of the files to unlock the contents of the other folder and the old files. Have any one used any software for this purpose? Can any one tell me how to modify the below to search for md5sum instead of CRC? md5sum /path/to/file/filename A: From reading your comment above it sounds like you're trying to use a different type of encryption than you are. While CRC32 is not the only type of encryption there are several methods to encrypt a file and then you can use CRC32 (and others) to attempt to guess the plaintext. If you're using a different type of encryption the
