CCleaner Cloud

This option will stop using the Cleaner Cloud software. . Change the value of this option to 1 to use the Cleaner Cloud cloud software, or to 0 to stop using it. . Leave this option set to 0 if you do not want to use the Cleaner Cloud software. More options were available for the registry than the components. Modify this setting to a new value of 1 or 0 to enable or disable Cleaner Cloud. The "More Options" tab provides three additional options: The number of days a task will be "stuck" after it is completed. This setting determines how long Cleaner Cloud will wait before trying to fix a problem caused by a task (such as a damaged registry or a virus). You can leave this setting at the default setting of 7 days, 0 days, or enter a number from 1 to 180 days. Note: Setting this value to a number from 1 to 180 days causes Cleaner Cloud to try to fix a problem if a task fails for a certain amount of time (depending on how much time the task takes) or if a problem occurs in a certain amount of time. When a problem occurs, Cleaner Cloud will try to fix it after the specified number of days have passed. Defaults to 0.

High CPU Usage This option determines how often Cleaner Cloud will scan for issues in the system. At the default setting of twice a week, Cleaner Cloud will check the registry and other components for problems each time it is started. You can change this setting to twice daily, daily, or twice weekly. Note: Setting this value to a number from 1 to 15 causes Cleaner Cloud to check the registry and other components for problems each time it is started. Defaults to 0. The last tab is the Options tab. This tab provides the following options: Configure Cleaner Cloud When Cleaner Cloud starts, it does not attempt to fix all problems it discovers. Instead, it warns you and provides an option to fix the problems manually. This option lets you decide whether to have Cleaner

Cloud fix all the problems it discovers. At the default setting, this option is enabled. To disable it, enter 1. If the option to
