According to an Associated Press report, if the weather stays cold for a month or more then the phrase could be acceptable. The American Council of the Blind (ACB) said that with states like Michigan announcing major snowfalls, the human body can begin to adapt to the extreme cold and it becomes harder to alert people. “Our winter adjustment takes about a month to build up and right now, we’re not seeing people trying to figure out how to get around,” said David Bruni, a spokesman for the ACB. “I hope that by the time we make it to March and April, we’ll have more people thinking about how they can navigate on their own.” The cold has forced some schools to cut their learning time down to part time. Others say if the week is cold enough they want to keep their students inside on sunny days when they can be outside. “I see my parents looking for the shades because it’s dark out and they want to keep the kids inside,” said 15-year-old Peyton Parrish.An Unnecessary Taxation It is unfortunate that the Solicitor General’s letter today providing the
