Long ago, the gates to the city of Tale were the only point of entry or exit. It was once a safe haven for all. But the town of Koto was never so fortunate. An old, cursed tower that stands on an island in the middle of the lake was rumored to hold the divine power of long ago. The dark and female spirit, "Mamari"-Honouhime- inspires her followers and governs over the entire forest. Koto-Town was once known as the town of mamari, but its name is forgotten to all people. The key to the past, the childhood of the inhabitants and the very lake itself... A key to everything lies within the walls of the ancient tower. Facing an enemy with no god, can the town of Koto protect its ancient house?

A time-lapse comedy game where you and your crabs are washed up on a beach on a dead, dry island, and your only goal is to clean it up by tidying up all the blocks you can with your crab friends. The problem with your beach is that blocks are washing in and out over the years, so you'll have to keep it cleaned up or else sea monsters will destroy your island for real! The beach blocks are all pentomino shapes, and your crab friends have to rearrange them into different locations before the washing up's done. Add new shapes to the mix and watch what happens. When you've tidied up all the blocks, you get an extra score! Washed Up! has five game modes to play; Classic, Time Attack, Free Play, Risk-reward and the brand new Storm Rush mode. Classic mode is our original game where you build and play by playing with the blocks that come from the cards and washing up from the beach. In Time Attack mode, you get set lengths of time to sort the blocks, with the option of playing it faster to improve your score. Free Play mode is where you play the blocks from the cards and washing up on your own without getting any score, and Risk-reward is where you have to arrange the blocks to get a combination of big points and clean beaches. In Storm Rush mode, you have a set time to place the blocks in the middle of the beach and you don't get any score, but you have to be wary of the incoming washing up! Think you've got it? Prove it with a trip to the Time Attack leaderboards! You'll need these in

We are far too critical on our kids. All children tattle in on stuff. We need to manage that tattle. When your kid gives you a weird look, sit them down and show them a rerun of that Tom Hanks movie where the mom gives him a weird look as a foreshadow of saying no. This goes above and beyond regular purdah. The mother knows (more accurately, a mother ought to know) her son has something to say, and she is choosing to ignore that for their own purpose. It's that poor girl's last straw. If she tries to go through the mom, the mom responds well, and ultimately the pawed in the boy gives up and deals with it when the mom's not looking. The same for your sitter-chi. If her giving you that "look" causes you to behave otherwise-meaning give her kid an extra cookie, cuddle, watch that movie with her-then she's probably prepared to do this kind of thing as a regular part of mom's tradecraft. If the talk leads to change (and not just making up an innocent lie), phew! It wouldn't be much of a tradecraft situation if the girl wasn't prepared to act on her powers over mom.Q: NDSolve fails with a message telling me that "Neither Maxima nor Minima exist" This is a numerical problem that I encounter when solving my PDE using NDSolve. It has puzzled me for weeks and I would love if it was just a trivial error I could quickly be pointed out. Or, for better or worse, I'm making a typo while writing the equation from the table of contents.
