Pint-sized pacer Lungi Ngidi was dismissed for five in India's first innings and it was the right call. Ngidi is a bowler of the short, sharp ball, and his bouncer is even better, but his in-swing is so tight that his pace and movement are almost incidental. He gets extra bounce from the surface and when the rough is uneven, the ball rises and swerves, hitting the pitch. But it is a lot harder to square the ball away on an uneven wicket and that was the key to Ngidi's downfall. Wherever this year's World Cup goes, there will be short, bouncy pitches and unfortunately for South Africa, India bowled their best in that department. Debutant Shahid Afridi played a typically skittish cameo but was the only South African to pass the 25-over mark, hitting 26 in four innings, including one three and a four. India's batting was never in question in the series opener, but their bowling - especially the spinners - need careful inspection.
